Market & Portfolio Developments

Market Review

Markets continued to decline in August after a brief respite in July - global equities fell by 3.64%. Increasingly, investors are contemplating the possibility of an incoming recession; causing anxiety about further declines. During such times, it would pay to zoom out and remember that markets have undergone similar phases before and emerging stronger, albeit never in a straight line up.

Main Contributors 'What did well?'

US Small-Cap equities outperformed amid market volatility despite their perceived 'riskier' profile; and are expected to do well when markets eventually rebound. Likewise, Asian equities proved resilient for the month, highlighting the importance of diversification.

Main Detractors 'What underperformed?'

Healthcare equities declined alongside softer market conditions but continue to be a valuable and important diversifier of returns in the current volatile environment. Europe equities similarly declined alongside poorer risk sentiment and concerns over higher inflationary conditions—we are paying close attention to headwinds here, which must also be balanced with more attractive valuations in the region.

Portfolio Activity

Activity was kept minimal, and the focus was on maintaining the integrity of our portfolio allocations.

Market Outlook

Undoubtedly, market declines have investors worried. Some may be looking to sell before further declines occur, while others waiting to catch the bottom. We remind investors that such market timing activities are rarely successful in the long-term - just missing a few of the best days in the market can have devastating repercussions on long-term returns. Hence, we emphasize on diversification across differentiated positions so that we are prepared regardless of where markets are headed in the near-term and focus on compounding returns for the long-term.
